

Do not overturn NJ's Do Not Call Law. This law has been blessing in my life and my families. My family and I can now have a life without always answering the telephone. As a former insurance salesman I can appreciate the need to make phone calls to make a living. But I called people who showed some interest my product or people who had done business with my firm in the past. The free market has its strong points, but not to the point where it interferes with people who do not want to be bothered. The telemarketers border on the edge of harassment. Please do your job and respect the will of the citizens. Tom Palmieri
